Washington Learns That Shipments Have Been Resumed.

Washington, June 12.—The sudden ollapse of the apparently overwhelm—"A friend of mine will lend me his collapse of the apparently overwhelmingly victorious westward march of the Russian armies into Prussia and across the Carpathians into Hungary and the severe reverses which they suffered since the turn of the tide at Przemysl, were directly attributable to the recent crisis in the relations between China and Japan, according to information which has reached diplo-

According to these accounts, in the beginning of the war Russia turned to Japan for a supply of war materials. Japan was in position to sell any quantity of ammunition and small arms and even cannon, after the successful siege of Kiao-Chow, when there was no longer need for main-taining the large army mobilized for that purpose. So all the Japanese reserve ammunition which could safely be spared was loaded on to freight and express cars and even passenger coaches on the Siberian railroad and despatched overland to Russia. In addition, the Japanese arms factories and metal works received and began to execute works received and began to execute rapidly great contracts for the supply of all sorts of military equipment to Russia, varying from field guns to uniforms and saddles.

When the negotiations between China and Japan regarding Manchuria and Mongolia and Kino-Chowsuddenly assumed a critical phase, it is said the Japanese government re-garded it as prudent to retain in Japan these military supplies as a precau-tionary measure in case the Chinese should go to war, and also because of should go to war, and also because of the possibility that some of the powerful nations which guaranteed Chinese integrity, even Russia being kept in mind, might endeavor to in-

The effect of the conservation of Japanese resources was almost in-stantly manifested at the far distant Russian front, for it developed that the Russians had exhausted all their own reserve stock of ammunition, and

In that emergency appeals were made to Japan to loosen the embargo, and pressure was brought to bear on country through her allies. it is understood now the current sup-ply again has been established, Japan having become satisfied that there was no longer imminent danger of trouble with China.
